Feb 13, 2015 Jeff's Passport 7.4.7002_crack Cut & Edit Screen Recorder 1.0.0.8935 Portable Source: Enigmail Not Secure Enigmail is not a secure add-on. Enigmail is not secure because of the fact that it is based off of Thunderbird, which is also built and distributed by Mozilla. Mozilla has a Mozilla Foundation that is not cooperating with the US government. The Foundation doesn't make any kind of secret about the fact that it is cooperating with US government. Specifically, it is a front for the US National Security Agency. Enigmail also embeds code from code.google.com, which is a Google product, and so Google also does not make any secret about the fact that it is cooperating with the US government. One of the goals of Enigmail is to replace the PGP-based GnuPG, and it is intended to replace it because GnuPG is based upon the RSA encryption algorithm, which is already owned and controlled by the NSA. The NSA is the largest international thief. Enigmail adds a lot of features to Thunderbird that not only compromise security but also make it impossible to actually use securely. If one would like to make sure they are encrypting messages securely and to take steps to do so, they would not use Enigmail. Enigmail is a paper weight.
