. then when it closes and restarts, there is no setup screen, no countdown screen and when i run gdm3, gdm3 doesn't work and i just need a gui to open the movie and allow me to view it on my windows media player buu: Are you sure you did install the driver with 'jockey-text -f' and not 'additional-drivers'? minimec: ah, heh I just installed the nvidia package and selected the recommended driver... but the only driver with a name is "nvidia accelerated graphics driver (version current) (recommended)" donofrio: you do, by default it is on your panel boooooooooooooo bazhang: Not sure what you mean? buu: So you installed the recommended one. Ok. Now try 'jockey-text -f' and see if it lists the driver that you installed... sangua: the Dockey software update/upgrade is in the repos right? donofrio: nope so synaptic and apt-get are different? bazhang: Think you should repeat your question? or do I have both? donofrio: apt-cache search docky donofrio buu: Also try 'nvidia-settings' and see what driver is in use. You might have to logout and login again afterwards... minimec: jockey-text only lists "Broadcom Corporation BCM43228 802.11a/b/g LP-PHY (rev 01) [Wireless Lan (Broadcom Corporation)]" thx ok thx buu: If you have a gtx 4xx card, you need to download the 'post-release' driver minimec: oh it's working minimec: I am using a "nvidia geforce fx 5700" 82157476af
